Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 27 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Warm and dry today, with sunny spells. Cloudier on Friday.

Today:
Any early fog clears quickly to leave a sunny morning for all except western Cornwall. A warm and dry afternoon follows, though high cloud will move in from the west turning the sunshine hazy. Warmest towards Gloucestershire and Wiltshire. Maximum temperature 20 deg C (68 deg F).

Tonight:
Increasingly cloudy for most overnight and generally dry, but a few outbreaks of rain are possible across northern and western areas through the early hours. Milder than Wednesday night. Minimum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Friday:
Friday morning will be mostly dry but cloudy. During the afternoon, outbreaks of rain might move into western areas and a few showers develop in the east. Temperatures slightly down. Maximum temperature 18 deg C (64 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Sunny spells and perhaps the odd shower on Saturday. Largely dry with sunny spells through Sunday and Bank Holiday Monday. Warmer than of late.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.